Downtown Sioux City Experiencing Explosive Growth, Transformation

Posted on September 10, 2020 by Kristin Hiller in Iowa, Market Reports, Midwest, Midwest Market Reports, Mixed-Use

Downtown Sioux City, Iowa is currently experiencing growth and transformation on an unprecedented scale. This emerging and vibrant place is not only celebrating its rich and colorful history with multiple historic property renovations, but has made strides to re-invent itself and take the downtown to new levels.

These efforts include the growth of new residential options, an increasing number of cultural attractions and quality-of-life amenities, new entry corridors and a commitment to an extraordinary and ever-evolving riverfront park. This energy and economic activity offers a range of development opportunities, including residential, office, retail and entertainment. While COVID-19 has had some minor impacts, all of the ongoing downtown construction projects have been able to stay on track and are being completed on schedule, as of the writing of this article.

Reinvestment district

Over $150 million in public and private capital is currently being invested in a 25-acre downtown reinvestment district. This entertainment, cultural and residential district has been designed to extend from the downtown's entryway directly into the heart of downtown. The district features four signature projects, with a total of 10 public or private buildings that will be fully completed in 2020.

These projects include a new $16 million Expo Center, which will welcome visitors and residents to downtown. The multi-purpose facility has been designed as an innovative and user-friendly building. With 100,000 square feet of space, it will host recreation activities on a full-size indoor sports field, as well as a range of major regional events.

Nearby, Ho-Chunk's $36 million Virginia Square mixed-use development is located along a new entry corridor to the downtown. The project includes two renovated historic warehouses, with residential and commercial tenants. The other two "corners" include a new four-story mixed-use building and a new Avid hotel.

The third component is a $25 million renovation and expansion of the Sioux City Convention Center, located in downtown's Historic Fourth Street district. The project features a new 150-room Marriott Courtyard Hotel developed by Kinseth Hospitality. The hotel is connected to the Convention Center facility, which has been upgraded with a new ballroom, pre-function space and a two-story parking deck.

The fourth and largest project is the $73 million renovation of two historic downtown properties, the Warrior Hotel and Davidson Building. Lead developer Restoration St. Louis is restoring the historic 10-story Warrior into a Marriott Autograph Hotel, and the adjacent six-story Davidson into a mix of commercial spaces, restaurants, hotel suites and market-rate residential units.

Historic transformation

The trend toward living and working in walkable urban environments has attracted mixed-use projects taking shape in renovated structures throughout downtown, including J Development's $21 million renovation of two multi-story downtown structures, the Commerce and Montgomery Ward Buildings, with commercial and market-rate residential spaces. The former Bekins warehouse is also now home to market-rate loft apartments.

The city recently took the lead with one of the community's most iconic buildings, acquiring the historic 12-story Badgerow Building. Utilizing a request for proposal

(RFP) process, plans are underway with a developer for a complete restoration for high-end residential, restaurant and office space. In addition to the interesting architectural features and historic character these properties provide, the mixed-use approach blends commercial activity and market-rate housing within pedestrian-friendly environments.

Investors are also constructing new buildings downtown. In addition to the Virginia Square project, Merge Urban Development Group is building a $6 million mixed-use facility on Historic Fourth Street that is slated for completion by mid-2022.

Authentic place-making

Downtown Sioux City, known for live music, festivals and events, has created several multi-faceted urban spaces. These are intended to serve as destinations to take advantage of unique historic and community assets, green space and cultural amenities and to provide positive visitor experiences and attract future residents.

The Promenade Plaza, in the heart of the Historic Fourth Street District and across the street from the new Convention Center hotel, is a short walk from great bars, restaurants and cultural attractions. The plaza was recently renovated and includes a fountain, informal seating and new lighting, and incorporates environmentally friendly bioretention cells to facilitate drainage. The adjacent Promenade Cinema 14 recently invested over $1 million in upgrades, including luxury recliner seating. A new local start-up, Marto Brewing Co., has joined the Promenade, with indoor and outdoor spaces.

On the west side of downtown, the Pearl Street Historic District, home to the Hard Rock Hotel & Casino and a vibrant farmers market, now includes the new Pearl Street Park. The urban park hosts the popular "Food Truck Fridays" event, averaging 10 vendors per event, from taco trucks to fusion, American fare, desserts and BBQ. The event often partners with the nearby LaunchPAD Children's Museum, offering free kid's activities.

Investments fuel growth

Several major improvements are contributing to downtown Sioux City's booming growth. The long-awaited reconstruction of Interstate 29 at the front door of downtown was completed in 2019. The redesigned system provides improved access to downtown and to Sioux City's extensive Riverfront Park at several key locations.

Located along the Missouri River, the Riverfront Park has long been a regional attraction, known for its many trails, pavilions, playgrounds and a marina. Construction began this summer on a "re-imagined" riverfront, an ambitious plan to create an extensive new park in a former riverboat parking area.

The first phase of an eventual $16 million investment will put basic infrastructure in place. Additional phases include several plazas, an overlook point, event lawns, an exploration ridge and a major iconic feature, which are expected to be completed by May 2022.

Other recent downtown projects include the Gilchrist Learning Center, a new 11,400-square-foot facility adjacent to the Sioux City Art Center, and the completion of an $11 million parking facility shared by the city and Hard Rock, to meet the demand for parking at the casino and nearby Tyson Events Center.

Despite Pandemic, Siouxland Retains Title Ranks First in the Nation for Economic Development

SIOUX CITY (Iowa) – Despite the COVID-19 pandemic, which adversely affected global, national, and local economic activity, the Sioux City Metropolitan Statistical Area (MSA) has retained the top spot for populations under 200,000 in Site Selection magazine's annual economic development rankings.

After finishing third in 2018 and first in 2019, the Siouxland tri-state MSA held on to the top spot in its population category for January through December 2020 according to results released by Site Selection located in Peachtree Corners, Georgia, a suburb of Atlanta.

Iowa Governor Kim Reynolds, who was in Sioux City to announce the national award at a 9:00 AM press conference, was joined by Mike Wells, the President and CEO of Wells Enterprises in Le Mars, Iowa. Wells currently serves as the Chair of the Board of Directors of The Siouxland Initiative (TSI), a not-for-profit economic development organization focused on increasing and enhancing employment opportunities throughout the tri-state region.

Addressing a gathering of local business executives, community leaders, and elected officials at the brand new $15 million Siouxland Expo Center in downtown Sioux City, Governor Reynolds stated, "This is welcome news and serves to confirm that, in spite of the challenges presented by the coronavirus, when it comes to economic development, communities throughout Iowa continue to be among the very best in the nation." Reynolds added, "I am thankful for the entrepreneurs and executives who have elected to grow their businesses in Iowa, and I am especially grateful for the jobs they have created and the capital they have invested in this particularly demanding year."

Site Selection's Managing Editor, Adam Bruns, who has journeyed to Siouxland to present this award on several occasions in the past but was unable to do so this year due to safety-based travel restrictions, released a statement which read, "I feel like I know Siouxland's economy like the back of my hand. So I know what a struggle this past year has been, especially for an area with such prominent food-processing employers. It must be gratifying to area leaders to see the metro area finish No. 1 among Tier 3 again. But this year's rankings carry extra good news, as Siouxland also ranks as the Tier-3 No. 1 when the numbers are examined on a per-capita basis. Truly outstanding results for a standout region."

In his first year of a two-year term as TSI's Chair, Wells reflected, "No one really knew what to expect from the first global pandemic in over a century, but it is reassuring to learn that despite enormous obstacles, our economy continued to perform well relative to similarly-sized communities throughout the United States." Wells went on to explain that he is acutely aware of and sensitive to the ongoing struggles faced by many businesses and individuals adding, "As a native of Siouxland, I am always proud of the way our community comes together in a crisis and that is certainly what we observed in the past year. TSI is indebted to the numerous local businesses that chose to expand right here in Siouxland, and we remain deeply appreciative of the many thousands of citizens who have focused on supporting our locally owned and operated businesses during the unprecedented difficulties brought about by COVID-19."

1,483 - 8,762 SF | $12.00 - 14.00 SF/yr Restaurant | Office | Studio

TSI President, Chris McGowan pointed out that the metro had qualifying projects in all three Siouxland states contributing to the fact that Iowa, Nebraska, and South Dakota currently have the lowest unemployment rates in the country. Highlighted by Sabre Industries' August announcement of a $25 million expansion, which is projected to create 76 new jobs, the Sioux City metro had 17 qualifying projects in 2020. Said McGowan, "With leaders like Governor Reynolds and Mr. Wells, I have every confidence that the cooperation between the public and private sectors, which is essential to robust economic development, will continue for many years to come."

In addition to Sioux City's top ranking, the Council Bluffs-Omaha MSA also appeared in the "Top-Ten," finishing ninth in the tier-two category representing communities with populations between 200,000 and one million. While visiting western Iowa, Governor Reynolds, took a moment to call attention to several eastern Iowa communities which were listed in Site Selection's annual rankings. Citing the magazine's inclusion of Clinton, Dubuque, and Davenport, along with Sioux City and Council Bluffs, Governor Reynolds expressed, "Iowa's collective performance in economic development this past year, is a testament to the determination and productivity of the exceptional people of Iowa." In the "Mississippi River Corridor" rankings, Clinton ranked first and Dubuque finished second for the number of qualified economic development projects per capita based on the 18 months concluding December 31, 2020. That same analysis has Davenport joining those two eastern Iowa cities in the magazine's Top-Ten cumulative rankings, with Davenport finishing sixth, Dubuque seventh, and Clinton ninth among Mississippi River communities. The Governor expressed her belief that the Site Selection rankings corroborate Iowa's classification as the state, along with Utah, to have the lowest risk and highest resiliency in recovering from COVID-19.¹

Each March, Site Selection magazine publishes its annual rankings. The publication specifies, "Qualifying projects are those meeting one or more of Site Selection's criteria for inclusion in the Conway Projects Database: a minimum investment of $1 million, creation of 20 or more new jobs or 20,000 square feet or more of new space."

The 2020 ranking marks the ninth time since 2007 that the Sioux City metro has ranked first in the nation in its population category by Site Selection. The Sioux City MSA was also recognized as the top economic development community for populations under 200,000 in 2007, 2008, 2012, 2013, 2015, 2016, 2017, and 2019. The Siouxland metro ranked second in both 2009 and 2014 and finished third in 2006 and 2018. The metro region has ranked in the top three nationally in its population category a remarkable thirteen of the last fifteen years.
